

"Half of couples fail to discuss dying wishes" (The Times - May 12th 2014)

Have you??

We all plan for the birth of a baby.
How many of us plan for the end of our lives?
How many of us tell our family what we want?

The check list, and the form which follows will make it much easier for your family to cope, if one day you can't manage your affairs and also when you die – whether this is sudden and soon, or in many years time.

It will allow you to plan for your death as others planned for your birth. It is not a Will. Together with your Will, this document will help you to die in peace.

You should consider answering the questions now, not "later"; later may be too late!

Whether you are in the prime of your life or in older age, but not please when it is too late!

The check list summarises most if not all of the possible information that will be needed by your next-of-kin and your executors and is designed around many real end-of-life experiences. The form allows you to record all this information and keep it up to date.

The form, when completed, will enable you, throughout the rest of your life, to be content that you have left no stone unturned. It is a gift to your family.

It is a good idea to check and update your form once a year or when major events occur. You can either:-

- A. make your own notes using the check list which follows or
- B. use the "Advance Personal Information" form, which you can complete on your computer and then print off a paper copy and/or save to your computer, or you can print the form then fill it in by hand. If completed on your computer, it is highly recommended that you save it to a plug-in USB "memory stick"

Either way, it will, of course, be a highly confidential document and it is recommended you file it with your will and in any event keep it very safe and let your family know where it can be found.

Remember that your document will not be for you; it will be there to help your loved ones cope when you are very ill or when you die. The document will be a legacy to them, something that will make life just that bit easier for your family at their time of distress. It will be your document; make it what you want it to be. But do it now - not next month or next year!

The check list is divided into several sections, all aimed at prompting you to answer the questions so others can manage your affairs when you no longer can.

1. Your personal information, including contact details for your family
2. Your wishes for when you die
3. Money matters, including investments
4. Employment & retirement matters
5. Your home and how to look after it
6. Your health and welfare
7. Your car and other possessions
8. Your pet and its welfare
9. Your digital legacy including social media and your computer
10. Inheritance Tax matters

Dying matters, so let's talk about it.
